

SALISBURY NEWSSTAND, SALISBURY, N. C.

The Community Building, one of Salisbury's Colonial structures, is considered a very fine example of the grand old colonial buildings of the South. The auditorium on the second floor is a rare example of the old time court room and public gathering place. The corner column to the left is known as the William Jennings Bryan Column as it was here that he delivered his last address in Salisbury.

The building to the right is the Rowan County Court House. It is one of the best in the South.
